My Life's Work - what I'm here to do - Gene Key 16

The key to your life is enthusiasm. The moment you allow anyone or anything to dampen your enthusiasm, you will find yourself on a slippery slope. You will naturally learn different skills in life, and your real power will emerge when you find a way to work with all these skills together. It is important that you don't allow yourself to become too attached to any specific technique or system, because if you do, you will be unable to demonstrate your real versatility. Your ability to pick things up quickly is a major key to your success in life, and again, you will not be able to do this if you tie yourself to a single method or routine. Whatever you find yourself doing in life will not be about the activity itself or your skills or abilities. What will make you special is your enthusiasm and love.

My Evolution - what I'm here to learn - Gene Key 9

It is one thing to find your enthusiasm, and it is another to maintain that enthusiasm and let it drive you in a single direction. If you are not careful, you could become an eternal seeker of the new without any central focus to draw all your skills together. This central focus within you must be practical, and it must offer you a feeling of inner and outer stability. Maintaining balance between diversifying and keeping a focus is likely to be the greatest single issue in your life. If you become too rigid, you will lose your enthusiasm. If you do focus, you will lack real power. Your evolution will constantly remind you to address any imbalance in this regard, so you need to see this tendency as your ally rather than your curse. Once you have really found your inner focus, you will probably never lose it again.

My Radiance - what keeps me healthy - Gene Key 37

One of the most important things in your life is to live with other people, as part of a family, group, or business. For you to live completely alone puts a great stress on your inner being, as well as affecting your physical health in a detrimental way. Your whole being thrives on interaction and the diversity of human relationships. This does not mean to say that you shouldn't spend time alone. Solitude is a necessity for everyone. However, you have a natural friendliness that continually bubbles beneath the surface, and if you cannot regularly express this physically through close personal contact and touch, you will begin to lose energy. The other necessity for you is to let go of giving conditionally. You are a naturally giving person, but have been conditioned to give in order to receive something in return. The more you can give unconditionally of yourself, the happier and lighter you will feel.

My Purpose - what deeply fulfils me - Gene Key 40

If you fulfil your Life's Work, you will be instrumental in building something during the course of your life. It will involve a group or groups of people. Your role is absolutely critical to the endeavour, because you will be the one who stands firm in your own needs. In taking your stand, you consistently bring grounding and stability to the group. Your life is a symbol of the importance of personal boundaries and the strength of individuals to stand up for themselves. You are here to sing out with the power of your own aloneness, even in the most intimate relationships. Furthermore, it is during those precious times when you are alone that you can most clearly feel the true purpose of your life.
